Anyone else find it interesting as to why Citadel would need to new investment from outside sources? If the company was operating like the rest of the industry last year reporting “record profits” why would they want someone else coming in and sticking their hands in the honey jar? Then as if on queue, right after the new investment GME sees new lows not seen in the last 10 months of trading going back to March of last year ■. Their plays of desperation are more obvious than ever. Thank you for the disocunt Kenny!!! ■■
