Now that the DTCC has implicated all brokers across the globe, making this an international situation now, what's going to happen now that it's a global risk? In terms of endgame. Before, we'd be getting tendies from US scumbag .01% but now all these other countries are on the hook for this GME mess too. I'm thinking there's 2 possibilities: the foreign brokers/banks/governments inevitably catch on to what has happened and go ape shit, call the DTC out on their bullshit and force them to fix it due to the outrage and worldwide attention. Fix it as in close their shorts. Including the ones unintentionally created by foreign brokers.

The DTCC and members might not be too big to fail as they say, but combine them with all the entities now involved? As for the second option, the one I am fearful of... the foreign bodies band together with the evil criminals in charge here and cancel mo-ass. I know it is crazy to think other countries working together but they also have their same scummy parasitic .01%.

Based on the past it may seem that the bad guys always win and get what they want, crime with no punishment, bailouts, manipulation at free will, etc. but I do think this is the true moment of reckoning for the parasites that have been feeding on us for decades, centuries even. The mother of all finales, mother of all boss battles. Movies and books will be written about this and relived for generations to come. Because I believe good will beat evil this time.

Thanks for reading.
