Looking for a discussion about where GME investors heads are at here. I own the stock, I like the company but what gives? The company has fanned the flames by hyping itself up and we get stuck holding bags. A large reason I got drawn in was because of the confirmation bias GameStop and Cohen have continually flung out to shareholders. Price never holds, we get one or two days of upside and then get bent over for the next 2 months. Lots of talk and little to no walk per say, and it's getting a bit old.

Not spreading FUD, just looking at current situation and trying to draw a reasonable idea of where others are at here. I'm still holding, and I plan on continuing to hold. Does anyone else feel this way? Genuinely curious.
