For a regular split the right to the split transfers even if you buy/sell after the record date.

For a dividend, the right does not transfer after the ex-dividend date. I believe today is the ex-dividend day (1 business day before the record date).

So here are my questions. Did RC buy more yesterday? He wouldn't buy today because he would lose the right to the dividend. Is that what caused the anomaly where the SHFs lost control yesterday? Are they going to be able to slam the price now that nobody that buys can get the dividend, making any shares they buy worth only 25% on splividend date?
