There was a discussion about how the stock split would affect short sellers on WSB. This guy seemed slightly against GME, but said this. It's very extreme, but sounded cool.

The guy he was talking with works for a hedge fund and has made calls to short certain companies. However, he did say he would never short GME or TSLA. Also said that the stock split won't affect the short sellers. This is in the sense that the short sellers don't have to put up any money with the split like they would if it was a cash dividend. He did not say anything about it revealing all the fraudulent shares from naked shorting, which will hopefully happen with the split.
