So I started wondering why he kept using this emoji in his tweets, and so far I haven't seen any theories put out about it so I thought I'd look into it: The first result that comes up from searching the poop emoji is Wikipedia saying "It can be used to convey disappointment or disapproval . . ."

There has been a lot of back and forth about options recently, could it be that he is expressing disapproval of the division surrounding the topic? I think finally as a community we're reaching a consensus that options are for those who know what they're doing and Buy/Hold/DRS is for everyone. Or is it to express general disapproval in the system as a whole which has failed to bring justice for blatant crime surrounding GME?

Usually the simplest explanation is the best, and the first result when searching for poop emoji is Wikipedia.

Let me know what you guys think, and possibly any theories that build on this.
