Why does getting "protected" by regulators feel more like getting hit in the face, spit on and robbed?

Web 1 = information

Web 2 = user-generated content

Web 3 = digital ownership (and the door to the metaverse)

Wagmi, frens.

But what comes then?

A chance to be greedy and "make it" further? Or a chance to lift up the ones who never truly got a shot?

Regulators have “protected” us from so many opportunities that we’ve forgotten what it’s like to be free.

Every day, crypto reminds me of the truth.

And I’ve never felt so alive.

The scales have fallen from the public's eyes. They've seen the earliest glimmer of crypto's power.

And this is the year The Decision truly matters.

Will we keep crypto free and open for all? Or will we sacrifice more than a decade of ideals for profit, "compliance" and growth?

The suits are coming regardless of where you stand. They step onto our land with their fat jowly cheeks stretched into sneers.

They don't see openness and cooperation and a chance to rewrite out-dated regulations. They see money, profit and control.

They come here to build their shitty fucking castles with their shitty fucking moats, closed ecosystems, censorship-stuffed, back-door laden, bank-friendly, power-worshipping, king-making, closed-source dogshit.

In 2021, we awoke the public to the power of Web3.

In 2022, we'll see who bends the knee. And who is truly charting a new way forward for humankind.

Never forget we are among the luckiest people in human history. Generations have lived and died without the opportunity to invest in a landscape like this.

And billions of people are still sitting on the sidelines even now.

The crypto rich could have more sway on the next century than kings and heads of state. We owe it to the moms and dads, the blue collar, the teachers, nurses and firefighters who have been unwittingly fucked by inflation to leave this place better than we found it. Do not hoard power. Do whatever you can to redistribute it.

We've heard a lot of mantras over the years:

"The institutions are coming."

"Retail is coming."

"ETFs are coming."

Now, there's only one mantra left:

"Grandma is coming."

(& she'll be wheeled into the sector by her financial advisor)

This is the year advisors get fomo and relent. They'll start recommending a tiny allocation of crypto to their clients. Perhaps, Fidelity will take the lead.
