An important note:

If a market crash occurs before MOASS, we could see massive institutional selling on GME before a turnaround be prepared to hold fast, as the dip could be quite extreme (while negative beta could mean we turn around before other equities it is not indicative of future price movement). Possibly the largest dip buy opportunity since February. This could be the truest test of diamond hands, I know some of you weren't around for the January or March dips, the fear of watching your account balance bleed away can be difficult for even the most experienced market participants. But as long as you remember the shorts haven't covered and trust your research and the DD it should be an interesting ride.
