In their last report, Gamestop stated they had 5.2 million shares as of October 31, 2021. Granted that was the beginning of the huge movement to DRS shares by apes and the numbers are surely bigger by now, but why is the number so small? RC alone owns 9 million shares and who knows how many other shares the other board members own. When you add in the amount of shares apes own, it should've been multiples higher than 5.2 million shares at that time, no?

The only reason that I can think of is that RC and insiders haven't or can't DRS their shares. Since apes have been known to try to decipher every of RC's tweets, the speculation is that his cone - poo - chair tweets were him cryptically telling us to DRS our shares. Well if that's the case, why aren't his shares DRS'd?

And for the record, I've DRS'd 62 shares that I had in TDA but can't DRS the remaining 1xxx shares I have in my Rollover IRAs.
