

Title: Requesting peer review of the following introduction to GME for non simian friends and family. Note: I'm a February ape on a throwaway account.

Remember that time in 2008 when the economy collapsed?

There was no warning in the news and people lost 40%+ of their retirement funds.

It's happening again, right now but WAY worse.

The world's economies are being propped up by massive debt and infusions of freshly created dollars that have caused record inflation. This is not sustainable and the Federal Reserve has announced a slow reversal.

There's another battle raging that media avoids entirely.

It's insanely complicated and involves the rich elite and politicians that rape the world for personal gain and power.

I'll do my best to make it concise.

Part One.

Hedge funds are private companies with a handful of ultra rich clients. Think Amazon's evil owner, Jeff Bezos.

Hedge funds make money by betting on a company failing. It's called shorting a stock.

Shorting is legal but hedge funds actively make companies fail so they can make money without risk.

They have attorneys file meritless class action lawsuits. They make personal attacks on a company's leaders and use illegal tactics to drive the company's stock price down.

They control the media and can make the price of any stock rise or fall via news.

They put people inside the company to help make it fail.

Think Sears and Toy's R Us.

Yes, they were driven out of business by hedge funds along with thousands of other companies, including some who were researching cancer and other cures.

Not content with how much money they were making, hedge funds pay a small fee to borrow shares of a stock to short.

They borrow and lend shares with made up, offshore shell companies that they control. They actually borrow more shares than exist.

It's called naked shorting. It's illegal but they pay millions to government regulators in "speaking fees" to look the other way.

Part Two.

Enter Ryan Cohen the Canadian that built Chewey, the online pet store into a huge, thriving business. He is a good, honest, hard working man that treats his employees and customers well.

He is also one of the smartest people on the planet.

Ryan took over management of Gamestop this year.

Gamestop has been the target of hedge funds for a couple of years.

Nobody knows exactly how much but we think hedge funds have shorted at least 300% more shares of GME than are available to trade.

Unless Gamestop goes bankrupt, the hedge funds must pay for every borrowed share, even the one's that don't exist.

The hedge funds have used every dirty trick to avoid this.

Part Three.

Stay with me on this.

Not going into the details here but at some point, the hedge funds will have to buy the borrowed shares. When they can't, their assets will be sold off to buy a stock that's not available.

After their assets are gone, other companies that are in the stock exchanges will have their assets sold off. (Again, omitting details here.) This will include a lot of banks and will domino to the the US government.

A lot of good, honest people around the world that have bought Gamestop stock knowing what's about to happen are going to make a LOT of money.

As great as this is, it's not the most important part.

There will be a massive transfer of wealth and power from the corrupt elite to regular people.

Be Prepared.

Get out of mutual funds now.

Some guys say precious metals index funds are good. Others say physcal gold and silver are best.

You can buy from Fidelity with no fees.

Not going into details, but after buying have Fidelity direct register full shares (not fractions of shares) with ComputerShare held as "book".

I know this sounds crazy but it's all true. Do your own research.
