Apes, I apologize as I did not catch buried in the "how can I attend the annual meeting section" of the Gamestop Proxy , the following statement and it was not brought to my attention:

"In order to ensure that your shares are represented at the meeting, we strongly encourage you to vote your shares by proxy prior to the annual meeting and further encourage you to submit your proxies electronically—by telephone or by Internet—by following the easy instructions on the enclosed proxy card.

Your vote is important and voting electronically should facilitate the timely receipt of your proxy."

There are so many twists, and so many players in the Proxy statement, I missed in my view is the key statement."

Although my "Legal Proxy Post was accurate as to the processes and it may be the way to ensure our beneficial shares are counted; Gamestop in their statement is strongly encouraging us to vote prior to the annual meeting." I don't know if CES Online service will allow you submit the Legal Proxy prior to the meeting, if not, there is a process to revoke the "Legal Proxy"; otherwise you can still vote at the meeting.

However, I encourage you to vote by proxy prior to the annual meeting as strongly encouraged by Gamestop. I apologize for any inconvenience my post on "Legal Proxy" may have caused and have immediately updated the posts.

I never spread FUD and you are welcome to examine my long history in this saga of always attempting to get to the truth, and providing helpful information, and helping fellow Apes stay vigilant. I am also someone who encourages Apes not to make self-inflicted wounds that could damage the M0ASS. Although my Post does not discourage voting, it is not what is strongly encouraged by Gamestop.

And if Ryan Cohen believes we should vote the proxy prior to the annual meeting, in Ryan Cohen I trust. Thank you.

We ride at dawn bitches.
