

Title: Serious question: If they weren't able to keep the price down during the sneeze and had to turn off the buy button, how can they now with all the buying pressure?

Not fud, serious question;

Why did they have to resort to turning off the buy button for gme during the sneeze, when now it seems they can drop and manipulate the price apparently at will, even in the face of tremendous ongoing buying pressure from retail, as evident by the daily DRS posts and total DRS tally?

Did they learn new tricks? Is buying pressure significantly lower now due to lack of mainstream fomo? Is it just massive naked shorting?

What's different? Why couldn't they use whatever they're doing now to keep the price down, also during the sneeze?
