In the days way way before GME, Stewart openly challenged Cokerat on CNBC's hand in the Sub-prime fiasco leading to the GFC and in particular his positions on Bear Stearns.

Despite the fact that I would have loved to have seen more in the show about DRS and actually trying to drive that message, I think this is only the start.

What we do know is that Stewart knows Cokerat is an abomination, and has no concerns about going toe-to-toe. I don't think this is done from Stewart's perspective just yet.
