As many other apes have said before about the HF algorithms, I'm certain they do not take into equation the following for GME.

Yes Ken said in an interview that they used human emotions heavily, tied that with the world we live in today. I.E place an order on Amazon depending on where you are you get the same day, want food use Doordash/Instacart the list goes on. My point is we are at a point we want things yesterday.

Now here is my strength and the case may be the same for many others. During my early years and into adulthood I can say, things have been financially tough almost two decades. My situation is much better today but it took a lot of work and patience for me to be where I am.

If the HF think that a measly one year wait is reaching my tipping point, buy they got 99 problems. I am willing to drag this out for years and years, the question is can they.

Whose with me that waiting now has become our strength, of course with other tactics like DRS etc..
