Smooth Brain/ First Post to this sub so take it easy with the hostility. We're all united.

1st off - Ryan Cohen is a rockstar.

2nd thing -

9 business days and counting since my request to DRS GME with no action. Called back two days ago and was told they'll move me to the front of the cue.

I'm aware of the 2 - 3 week lag time due to a surge of activity but as we all know, it wouldn't take this long if they actually had your shares that they sold you.

It's my first 60 shares of many but I decided to share this with you guys. Don't procrastinate.

I dragged my feet with DRS. I was wrong. I just didn't understand the game enough to realize how vulnerable we all are if the brokers control our shares. They can pull the carpet out from under your feet anytime they declare a "market emergency." That button we press to agree to Terms & Conditions is basically giving them power of attorney (figuratively speaking) to steal your investment to protect themselves.

As soon as the first 60 shares are officially DRS'd, I'll register the rest.

It's still not too late. New gears are moving now that could speed up the process.

Good Luck.
