

Title: AH Price movement and sus news releases could be a maneuver by shf's to control the narrative as the cock swallowing Cramer likes to brag about.

Good evening fellow apes & appetites, I definitely do not ever post. I'm a lurker for sure. I have some thoughts on the Ah spike and news that I'd love some opinions on from some like minded people.

(Not real life ppl who already think I'm a crazy conspiracy theorist when it comes to gme.)

What if Kenny and gang know that in the next 3 to 5 weeks they are going to be facing extreme financial obligations.... FTD's, CYCLE THEORIES, EXPIRING PUTS, ETC...

Now, these douchbags, are afraid that if GaMeStop were to drop its metaverse, NFT, or any game changing press release while the shf's were so close to a margin call, it could and may break them. Me, personally, I'm hoping that RC & team were planning on doing just that by waiting for a moment of financial stress to break the news.

This is what I got to thinking when I saw how this played out AH, with the timing of the articles and the price spike. I'm thinking this may be a bit of a preemptive strike by the shf's. What if they are thinking, "well, if we don't know when RC will drop the news, and we know that he could break us with it in a few weeks, then let's release our own version of the news to control the narrative and bring on the FOMO buying while we still have enough margin to control a price spike".

By releasing this news it makes it seem like gme already released the big reveal and the price action came and went. If gme does release their actual news in a few weeks I'm sure many investors will see the articles and think to themselves, "oh this again I already saw this last month", and move on without another thought.

If this is part of Mayo man's playbook then I'm sure there would be some follow up articles in the near future saying that GameStop finally dropped there big news and it was only a lackluster performance on the stock price! Everyone, the hype is over, GameStop blew their load and the moass didn't happen. Sell your positions take your losses and move on. It's all done with and there's nothing more to see here.

TL;DR

SHF's may have released their version of what they think gme's gameplan is going to be in a way to "control the narrative" and at the same time slow down and decrease FOMO buying when the actual news comes out. I really really hope that the actual news is different in some big ways. But I'm sure Kenny boy paid some asshole who used to work at gme for info. Ok ok that part is a bit speculative. Haha shit the post is.
