Was reading discussions on various things in my TOS chat rooms. Some of these people think they are free to give financial advice when they want without being asked. I'm not sure who this person was but, they were really attacking GME investors saying they were buying and holding rocks, not diamonds. My comment back was "This from a firm that has shelving that burns up company data at a moments notice"

My feeling, Apes is that all these firms are crooked to some extent and we are in this together, and in it to win it.

They will go down and we will go to the moon.
