This will be downvoted very quick because we have a lot of bots around these days, working in the industry and pushing these narratives. The latest one is "get into options". I say fine, do what you like BUT remember this...options is a very dangerous game and tips the scales even more into the scumbags' favour. The markets are already rigged and buying options (even if you immediately exercise them" is not buying or even attempt to buy real shares.

1. Check the terms and conditions of your options platform

2. Recognise that everyone who day trades options and spreadbetters LOSE MONEY. It's like playing the fruit machines. It's that bad. Don't believe any guru who tells you otherwise. It's bottom of the bucket kind of stuff. I appreciate Roaring Kitty used options but hey he is one in a million. He has a huge following, picked the right thing at the right time and was a totally unique situation. You are not roaring Kitty,

3. Work out your margin and loss potential. If it goes down to $100 or $80 or $40, can you afford it? Will the platform close your position? Remember stop losses are just an easy target for these scumbags to hit. Your stop loss will always be spiked.

In summary, buy GME and hold. Don't mess about with options. It's fraud.

Peace.
