Beijing . Yu Liang chose dramatic words to describe the situation at Vanke. "This year we are facing a fight for life and death in which there is no gray area," the head of the second largest Chinese real estate developer in sales told his employees earlier this year.

Vanke, Shimao, China Fortune, Kaisa - the list of Chinese real estate companies in crisis is long. What began with the most prominent case, with the case of the highly indebted Evergrande  group, has long since expanded to the entire industry.

Only 2.3 percent did the average prices of new homes in the 70 largest Chinese cities rise by 2.3 percent in January compared to the same period last year,
