

Title: Just a quick thought - keep this really stupid.

Author: BasicAd4976

Created 2021-08-17 03:30:44 UTC

Permalink: /r/TheGloryHodl/comments/p5vuj7/just_a_quick_thought_keep_this_really_stupid/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheGloryHodl/comments/p5vuj7/just_a_quick_thought_keep_this_really_stupid/

Is_self: True

We have the worst health related spending that required trillions to be printed and spent. A war that is about to flare up and cost untold $ again....housing crisis that is going to cost millions of people their homes and debt that removes expendable income from people to spend at businesses that are clinging to life, inflation at horrible levels, while the big banks continue to reaper record profits...

With all of that being said, for the first time in 60 years the debt ceiling hasn't been raised.

The only logical explanation is 80% of gme is owned by Americans. It's been calculated (more like speculated, but probably true) that 80% is 164 million shares. Approximately 7x the tradeable shares.. @ 1 milly a share that = $164,000,000,000,000 short problem. Now let's take 38% capital gains into account equalling a measly $62,320,000,000,000. These numbers sound stupid even as I type them.... that 62 trillion is what gets put back into the American economy... well that's the war and pandemic and whatever the fuck else you want paid for off the backs of hedgies, Dtcc and Big banks etc...

Why do you think that congress took 6 weeks off without raising the debt ceiling. Because, it's about to get paid back and honestly how high would they have to go to cover this shit...

Banks, hedgies, regulatory entities all need to get their shit in line really soon.... this is going to get nasty.