All, want to bring this to your attention, there are some particular researchers/professionals that have taken a much more 'academic' approach to spreading Gamestop FUD.

I have reached out to them independently to verify information sources, stats, and have not heard ANYTHING (which is uncommon because I am a licensed professional in the sphere).

This event, hosted by the Columbia Business School Richard Paul Richman Center for Business, Law, and Public Policy, is spearheaded by this researcher Josuha Mitts. He recently published a paper about the social media aspect of these squeezes and of course, he glazed over what reddit really is and misrepresents APES.

If anyone is interested in attending, I will be there for sure.

I am asking this now, PLEASE BE RESPECTFUL. We can ask hard questions, just don't be a dick about it.
