So i seen a post about crook Jim Cramer saying gme is a strong buy and whenever he says this people end up in the red so with shares being added to the company wouldn't it be wise to not buy at the moment? The reason i say this (and if im wrong please correct me if i am) but dont you have to own your shares for a certain amount of time to be eligible to get the those extra shares that will equal the same value as what you own now? If im right i feel like that could discourage many people who listened to him and buy at this moment because they'll be losing money since they didnt own the shares for a that certain amount of time. Wouldn't it be better to wait and buy when the added shares come so you can get more bang for your buck? I do only have like 2 working brain cells so forgive me if im wrong about this all.
