

Title: Hey u/realpulte, a lot of us think the economy is going to collapse soon. What's your opinion?

Author: Erratic-Hunter

Created 2022-04-13 14:43:43 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/u2rwt7/hey_urealpulte_a_lot_of_us_think_the_economy_is/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/u2rwt7/hey_urealpulte_a_lot_of_us_think_the_economy_is/

Financial institutions like Melvin Capital , Citadel, and other who have shorted GME will soon have to provide real shares for every synthetic they've created PLUS seven real shares of the soon to be issued stock dividend.

Now the dividend is the key. They don't have that many shares in their possession to distribute and will have to buy what they need on the open market causing a price increase. But since so many of us are not selling until we see share prices resemble telephone numbers, this could lead to margin calls and bankruptcy. But not it's not just GameStop that will rise in price, it's all the stocks they've shorted (the meme stocks and others). Also, on top of that, so many financial institutions are way over leveraged and have too much bad debt from China and Russia.

It's not going to take much to send our economy tumbling down, and once it starts, it's not stopping.

Even if the Federal Reserve starts to massively pump dollars again like they did during 2020, there's so much cash in the economy that adding more could lead to hyperinflation.

Do you have any thoughts on this? Do you see any hope out of this quagmire?