

Title: Honest question: how does this really end?

Author: tommygunz007

Created 2022-01-06 17:52:25 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/rxkhfl/honest_question_how_does_this_really_end/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/rxkhfl/honest_question_how_does_this_really_end/

So recently someone posted in another GME subreddit a video of a millionaire buying all the shares and the stock was still traded to 0 the next day. It then went to court and they pulled out the 'nothing to see here' and got away with it.

In the last year, GG has created all new sorts of laws, and laws ONLY apply to American Soil, allowing overseas markets to continue to short sell. Remember, short selling is only illegal on US Soil, but if they were to do it in the Caymans, it's legal there. The laws have done zero to impact the market in any legit way to protect the retail investor. It's all a giant smoke screen to protect the rich.

Dark Pool Whisperer Stefanie Kammerman went on a popular YouTuber's channel and gave an interview in which she said the SEC likes to make laws to quiet public outrage but the SEC 'always leaves a back door open for the rich to keep doing what they do'. When asked why the system doesn't change, she basically indicated that anyone who tries to challenge the system would wind up missing in the vegas desert.

So, given all this evidence, the only conclusion I can come to is this: that at some point, the number of shares accounted for on DRS will equal the number of TOTAL shares out there, indicating that there are billions of synthetic shares out there. When that happens, then what? The SEC isn't going to do jack st right?

So my question is, how then does this end when Apes have 'every' share but it's still traded and the SEC does nothing? There won't be any ape army with pitchforks in washington because they are Komplicit in this market manipulation. The only outcome I can see is either (1) they rewrite the laws to quickly screw us which is something they have done before, or (2) they force a judge to rule against us even though we are right (like what happened with that guy who bought all the stock) or (3) something else?

I understand that what we WANT is it to explode to $10k/share but the second we can prove we own ALL SHARES then it becomes something entirely different. It then becomes a criminal/legal matter and not a financial one, and if there is one thing we see time and time again is that the criminals are never going to cover, and never going to pay. You can prove Bernie Madoff broke the law, but you can't make him pay you back. So maybe that's what will happen here? Like Kenny G will have some fall guy assistant say he broke the law, and he goes to jail or pays a fine, and then they invalidate the GME shares? I just can't see any other way that this is supposed to end when there are potentially millions of fake shares out there.

So I am looking for any clarification as to how I am supposed to make millions off my shares when no clear path has been established once the DRS shows all shares are owned?