

Title: I'm seeing a lot of interest in what might be potential catalysts and the two best options are 1) NFT/Crypto Dividend of some kind, or 2) a market crash

Author: Endlessnesss

Created 2021-09-12 19:19:05 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pmz5bi/im_seeing_a_lot_of_interest_in_what_might_be/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/pmz5bi/im_seeing_a_lot_of_interest_in_what_might_be/

Let's say, in theory, that the dividend doesn't happen and we need a market crash to lower liquidity. I thought it was discovered quite a bit ago that the majority of SHF (at least the major funds) positions were actually shorts. Would a market crash not actually increase their liquidity and the value of their short positions? I feel like I'm surely missing something as no one is talking about this.

I'd love to hear some discussion about this.

I'll happily link the post(s) claiming that the majority of the positions are shorts once I find it, digging through my saved posts now.