Hi Everyone,

This is my opinion that GameStop had actually acquired Loopring or have a deal to acquire them on a certain date....hmmm I don't know lets go with Feb 22 2022 :) ? First Matt resigns. At the height of where Loopring is as far as advances and updates and almost fully Launched he leaves them to work at Gamestop? Yes...there's a partnership as we found out with the IMX announcement...but the details are super cryptic. Because the impact will be bigger? An acquire or merger is bigger right?

Things are definitely very secretive between these two companies but what we do know is that Gamestop hired Matt Finestone. Former Head of Business for Loopring. How you do go and straight up hire (or in harsher terms POACH) the Face of someone else's business.....and STILL DO BUSINESS WITH THEM!? Matt attends/host at conventions and speaks at interviews on behalf of Loopring in many occasions, he is the Face of Loopring.

They must have an agreement in place. Why else for the Loopring CEO change (which was unofficially announced Sept/2021) and cryptic tweets that don't tell the full story from Daniel Wang. He has a deal in place already and his big pay day has come. He still has to keep his mouth fairly shut till then. RC Ventures and Friends may have ponied up BIG to acquire and have full control of a blockchain technology that is designed for SCALEABILITY. That is one of RC's area of expertise.

TLDR: Speculation - Ryan Cohen and Gamestop owns Loopring! Gamestop will have full control of multi-function blockchain technology and the first retain from the merger was Matt Finestone to oversee the Loopring team.

This is just my own opinions and thoughts. I am bullish on both company's futures. This is not financial advice. Do your own research. Thanks for reading my post.
