Long time lurker, first time poster.. been here since the start.

I've been in love with the GME movement since Feb 2021 when I first heard about it and did my DDs. As a full-time student attending college I haven't had much in terms of being able to drop into the DRS bot, (XX-holder, almost XXX,) most of my shares are basically what I can spare and still survive because I have hope in all of us being able to hit the hedgies where it hurts.

But today I'm at a crossroads where I have to decide to either push with the movement or pull out (and I never pull out) selling at a loss and missing the moment of a lifetime to save my dog who needs $10,500 for surgery.

I don't know what to do... I need my fellow diamond handed smooth brains to help me by reassuring me that I can make both happen, that we're mooning this week, that somehow I'll raise the money and be able to stand with all of you.. Because what's a Lambo worth if I don't have my best friend with me in it? I don't know where the sell button is, but I feel like I'm being forced to find it.

Sorry for the shitpost, but you're the only other friends I got to vent to.
