I don't want to cause FUD to get you to DRS but my concern is that when there are no shares available anymore that all shares still with brokers can't be real shares.

After all the effery we've seen do you really think this will go down in retails favor even though the "right" is on our side?

I don't think so.

I could think of something like "Sorry we have to revert your orders of 120 shares, here is a compensation of $5k." Maybe not even anything because that would mean they'd acknowledge wrong doing.

Then lawsuits follow that go nowhere for years etc.

Feel free to get eyes on this on other subs since I think that this is something people haven't thought about in depth, yet.

I go shopping with Ryan Cohen at GameStop!
