I've only ever been an x holder since $385, when I FOMO'd and dropped all of my savings into GME. I did the best I could since then, holding while I lost my job, my apartment, and almost everything I own. I've gone weeks eating whatever I could find for free, and days eating nothing at all, and I for as long as I could... But today I sold.

I've been silent this whole time, but I was there when DRSing was first catching on, when we all switched brokerages on more than one occasion, and when Robinhood shut off the buy button.

I didn't sell because I don't think GME will moon, I know that it has to, there is no other way... But I can't go on any longer.

I wish you all the best of luck and the biggest of tendies. Change the world for those of us who couldn't hold on.

Goodbye. ♥■
