The other day Kenneth griffin from citadel securities got on national television and told the financial world that retail investors are to blame for diminishing pension funds. Now I don't know about anybody else but I had no access to anyone's pension fund. The only money I am allowed to invest is my own money from my bank account. How can I be blamed for this? I don't even have 10,000$ invested in the stock market?

I don't understand how buying a stock and not selling it you can cost other people so much? I guess it's hard to admit that one's greed has costed so many other people their life savings.

But if any teachers came to here to see what's happening now with GameStop you can get it all back and some. And you can get in at a very attractive price! BUY and HOLD! DRS!!
