The DOJ website is coincidentally down at a time when a lot of concerned GME investors might be feeling the urge to report the DTC's criminal activity. Weird, huh? You couldn't write this stuff if you tried.

Speaking of writing, I found myself thinking of the upcoming movie, Buy and Hold. (I assume that's the title. The Big Long, well...that's more of my wife's boyfriend's biopic)

Imagine the fun a director will have plotting the last couple of years by coming to this, and a couple other subreddits. Every move, no matter how big or small, in this saga properly documented.

I "suppose" the DOJ could also weave a chronological timeline out of all this, but I won't hold my breath until their website is back up and running.
