The company can take as long as they want to make an announcement. MOASS can take as long as it wants to happen. As long as these events occur before you would have reached retirement, then you made the best choice. If you compare investing in GME to investing into a retirement account while being in the workforce for decades, GME will earn you more money in a shorter amount of time. At my current age, I have about 35 years before I'll reach retirement age. I can hold that long. Any moment before that is a shortcut.

Not to mention, if you've diamond handed for at least one year, your taxes from MOASS will be significantly lower. I'm looking forward to my first shares birthday in January.

So don't feel like things are taking too long. It will happen precisely when it means to.
