Post wasn't long enough so you get my standard tips below.....

1. Buy Long (Actual Shares of $GME) and hold if options are not your thing. Trading options recklessly is bad, bad, bad for your financial performance. You also give your money to entities that will indeed be further less helpful to your financial goals. Worstest of all, you lose all your tickets to play. Holding shares ensures you will be around for the exciting stuff. (Tomorrow before you ask, always tomorrow).

2. Buy At The Money Strikes and Far Dated Expiries - If you find Note 1 is not for you, but you have not yet lost enough $ on options to know that, then consider at the money (ATM) strike prices that are dated far out of the money.

Be well. Not Financial Advice. Any financial decisions you make are your own journey in their entirety! F Yeah this is a great time to be alive! – Moon Ambassador
