Chilling here, Sleepless in the Midwest, and I got to thinking - which is a bad idea for a nobody like me - what is the unexpected of all the unexpecteds that could kick off a big move higher. We all know the following.

1. GME Marketplace
2. GME Dividend
3. GME Split
4. Something RC cooked up in the kitchen.

But what if it's not so complex... what if Melvin still owns their shorts and haven't closed? What if they are the catalyst as the first to close (returning nearly nothing to their investors) and thereby wrecking all the other SHF? They gave us the deadline. They have to follow it. What if Melvin is the actual fuel that lights our ■? Wouldn't that be somethin!

NOTICE - I am a degenerate who can barely read and is even more poorly equipped for speculation. This is not financial advice, as no one should take any advice from a bum like me. No facts were presented. I wish you all the best, happy Hodling.
