Came here to get honest opinions because I can't figure out why gme has consistently been so quite.

Do we really believe there will be price action after any announcement from gme?

We all know exactly what they are doing, nft, partnership with loop, and development of their marketplace. This is old news at this point and every company is moving towards this and already announced it. Do we believe this will even move the needle, or is nft dividend the only thing to fuel this rocket?

Gme owes its shareholders, no one can ever convince me otherwise. They have raised over a billion dollars from apes around the world at a $225 cost basis, that's from teachers, nurses, police, fireman, businessman, drivers (most importantly Only Fans actresses)...all of us, mothers, fathers, brothers, and sisters the normal everyday hard working individuals of the world. When will we be protected by our company?
