Many investors who were in GME stock early clearly won big.

But that's ancient history now. What matters now is looking ahead to what's next. And there the picture is less clear. Fundamentals are challenging at best. And the chart is volatile and lacks a clear buy point.

It's fine to watch this as a sign of speculation in the market. But when looking at long-term winning stocks, you can do better. But if you'd like to speculate, make sure you don't bet too much and don't forget the golden rule of investing. Cut losses short so you can find and invest in the next big winner.

Remember that investors who make money over the long term own companies with strong profit, not just surging stock prices.
