My folks are in town. They know a smidge about gamestop, but not much.

Dad me last night - "so. you're still happy with your gamestop stock?"

"Yeah, I'm pretty happy.": Just told them that

1) I think this is like buying Amazon when they only sold books.

2) The Chairman was already built and sold a multibillion dollar company -Chewy. (They know about Chewy.

3) The Price - Earnings ratio should have the stock at least twice the current price.

4) They've poached top talent from Amazon, Microsoft, Google, and Apple who are mostly getting compensated in stock and need to see the stock price about double before they make any money. Amazon execs don't leave to join failing companies.

5) I think this is going to be big.

Dad said, "Interesting..... hmmm".....

Left it at that. We'll see. Hoping that's enough to get him to jump in a bit. Doesn't really matter for him. He's retired, and they're pretty set for their modest lifestyle. And if Mo' ASS makes their portfolio crater, I have them covered.

But they're visiting for 3 more days. IF he asks about again, I know he's really interested.
