Heya smooth brain here was just looking through some of the old Roaring Kitty streams that are on youtube. Specifically the Oct 14th, 2020. In the video at the 25:45 point of the video he pulls up iBorrowdesk and talks about rate doubling. If you look at that chart on the screen it actually sorta looks like the January squeeze but it happened in May. June to December is 7 months. Jan to April is 4. That just leaves May. Could be nothing but I believe the Ryan Cohen tweets to be related to the months for some reason. It also looks like youtube may be supressing all of Roaring Kitty content. No way this video only has 5.5k views and 249 likes after what gamestop did in January and /u/DeepFuckingValue got called into Congress. People would be looking into this guy. What do you think?
