I don't get the hype train at all, there's no need to hype something with solid fundamentals. We should be optimistic whilst encouraging patience among apes, and setting realistic timelines (only if we feel like we can make an educated guess). Why even make-believe what's gonna happen, we all have our non-make-believe hard earned dollars invested in Gamestop. Many of us struggle to get by and want a better future for ourselves and our families. Meming once in a while, fine. But it's gotten annoying, especially in the face of all the blatant corruption that is playing out. We should be prepared to hold throughout and encourage patience and keep up the morale nonetheless.
