

Title: If eToro or other broker apps don't allowing transferring shares, would forcing them to find the proxy numbers which correspond to the share held by cède and co be helpful?

My theory here is that if they start scrambling to find the shares and deliver the proxy numbers to the actual shares held by cède and co, they could potentially run into problems being able to locate said shares. This won't be as effective as DRS with CS I think, but it could put pressure when other brokers start transferring said shares to CS. If our shares are confirmed with a proxy number, then when CS transfers slow down, à double check of the proxy numbers could be completed which may show the shares are no longer held by cède and co, hence, phantom shares. I've already asked eToro if they can do this, I saw someone else has done the same, we need to keep up the pressure now on the brokers that don't allow transfers to CS.
