

Title: Honest question: what happens after we DRS the entire "float"? If every share acts as real, can't they just keep borrowing/creating synthetic shares?

Aside from the fact that once the total amount of registered shares match the float amount then we can obviously proof there are more shares than what should exist, even though I believe that's not a mystery to anyone anymore, at least not the people that could actually do something to help the cause since they are all in it together. But as the title says, can't they just keep doing the same crap considering all shares are treated as "real" on their electronic bullshit system?

Hope some wrinkly ape could help deciphering this one.
