

Title: Questions about GME financial and balance sheet.

Author: Relentlessdrive

Created 2022-02-19 06:03:06 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/sw313g/questions_about_gme_financial_and_balance_sheet/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/sw313g/questions_about_gme_financial_and_balance_sheet/

Hi all, I know this may seem like a dinosaur post but I want to have a healthy discussion in regards of current GME balance sheet, debt level, free cash flow and any other financial dimension about GME. What do you think from the latest report and what do you think now in Feb/March 2022. I feel that 2022 will be a huge downturn for many overvalued companies, especially those who leveraged themselves.

There are many large cap companies like $50 billion market cap with revenue less than $1 billion. Let alone talk about their debt level.

GME looks safe in terms of cash vs debt. I am still trying to learn the short term and long term liability. I want to make sure the downside protection for GME.

Short squeeze is hard to tell, so we are not going to talk about that. What struck me during the Congressional Hearing last year that Ken Griffin kept saying that they will adapt with anything. They are the House in the casino. They can do whatever, I don't care.

It's insane, I just realized the congressional was exactly a year ago. Feb 18, 2021! Wow!

The best is to hold my cards and hold my winning tickets. It's worth more than what they are saying at the moment.

What I care is to buy, hold, register my share by DRS.

What I care is to have a good discussion and good outlook about the real GME financials. Not thin air speculations.

Anyways, pardon my English and grammar. My first language is Ape language and I wrote this using one Ape finger.