I recently DRSeD the remainder of my shares from Questrade. Normally Questrade charges $300 (wtf?!). But I discovered that BMO will DRS for FREE!

Now you might be thinking that's all fine and dandy but my shares are already in a [insert broker] account. Well, you can transfer them to BMO. And what's more, BMO will cover some or all of the transfer fees. In my case a "full" transfer from Questrade would cost $150 and a "partial transfer cost $25. BMO would cover the $25 so I bought one share of a company that sells more than just bedroom and bathroom stuff and requested a partial transfer (ie all of my GME shares). They told me it would take 20-25 business days for the transfer to complete, but my shares were in my shiny new BMO account in 3 business days!

I haven't posted DRS proof yet of these shares because they are yet to arrive in my Computershare account.

I can't post/comment in Superstonk yet because my account is too young, but maybe someone can post this there or pass the info along wherever you see fit.
