Hello guys, I think there was a reason why we shouldnt Post our real positions so I will use false ones but in a way that it still make sense.

Ive got 20 gme shares before splivident, on july the 21 ive got my 60 shares as splivident (with a document that says so). To that point everything is as it should be. Ive got 80 shares and my buy in is a quarter of the pre split one lets call it 100/25 Dollars.

Then 10 hours ago (29.07.2022 23.47) my position shrink, I lost my splivident shares (now there was a secound document that undo the first one). I was back to 20 shares and the buy in was 25 Dollars.

One hour and 14 minutes later, there is a new (3rd) document. This time it doesnt called split, but stock dividend, this time the mentioned amount is not 60, but 20. However I am back to the right amount of shares.

This time my buy in is not the one pre split, not a quarter of it, but like 180 % of the pre (!!) split buy in. Am I right that the buy in should be a quarter of the one pre split?
In that case my buy in is like 7 times to high right now.

So in my smooth brain ape opinion there are two possible scenarios.

1. It was a mistake to give me my shares as a split and they redone it as a stock dividend, in that case my buy in should update in some time.

2. Fuckery

Tldr: My depot was changed 3 times to make splivident work (Not one time for some reason), my buy in is way to high now.
