Think about it. Millions of apes rally behind the stock because they love it. Rocket emojis everywhere. Next thing you know GameStop is selling rocket emoji apparel. They (the GME team) are definitely watching these subs, as well as the whole rest of the world (msm, twitter, coke rat Cramer, Gensler, etc) more than likely. People are following the situation more closely than ever because it's unique! Never before in history has there been such a dedicated, laser-focused collective of INDIVIDUAL retail investors all backing a company they found they loved.

Here's my point: R.C. and team are motivated by the interests of their shareholders to work. That's what draws the best out of people— when work is meaningful to the people around you and has a chance to create actual effect on peoples' spirits and minds. I compare it to the monotonous work culture we see in Capitalism vs. the work we used to do when we lived in smaller, barter-system towns. Everyone coming together to build a well for example meant water for the whole town! Now we work for what? To make our oligarch CEO's wallets fatter whilst having no actual effect or benefit whatsoever for society as a whole.

Now. With this in mind. What else do you think R.C. Wants to know from us? If this post takes off (too low km to post on SS so anyone feel free to copy over) and R.C. somehow sees this I want him to know this single, most self-evident truth coming direct from an individual GameStop shareholder (you can check my DRS post history):

THE GAME IS RIGGED AND I WANT OUT.

It is clear the value of our stock price cannot ever see fair price discovery whilst the supply of our common stock is being held at the mercy of the overlords at Cede & Co nominee and the DTCC. Please! GameStop team. Do whatever needs to be done (I know you guys love to WORK!) to ensure our beloved GME stock can be removed from the DTCC depository and tokenized on a fair blockchain exchange— a place where share ownership can be explicitly tracked.

There should be no reason that I, as an individual investor, has to go through the such massive loopholes like hopping from broker-to-broker and eventually finding the transfer agent Computershare just to have ACTUAL share ownership in the company I love. Surely, in this modernized, digital age of markets we can have a more streamlined process for interested retail investors to hold their positions fairly and transparently. A way to level the playing field one might say. As always, it's power to the players.
