

Title: The Future Of The Financial System

Author: disoriented_llama

Created 2022-09-11 02:04:38 UTC

Permalink: /r/TheGloryHodl/comments/xb6dtu/the_future_of_the_financial_system/

Url: /r/loopringorg/comments/xard4p/the_future_of_the_financial_system/

Linked Post Content:

FTX is the algo king of the world when it comes to risk management and derivatives. That's what tokenized stocks are - they are just derivatives of the real thing. I doubt RC is looking to FTX to tokenized the stock - however their algo sounds to me like it is the "piece de resistance" and everything Ken wishes he could be.

Instead, I would expect FTX to be the global DERIVATIVES platform for everything crypto, digital assets, and NFT's and blockchain stock offerings.

I see Loopring as the infrastructure platform to create the GME/ETH or GME/LRC liquidity pairs and also allow for other crypto markets to plug into their liquidity pools for aggregating.

Then using 0x, Uniswap, Pancakeswap, they can create an automated market maker that plugs directly into the Loopring liquidity pools which creates a central access point for someone like FTX to use as "locates" for their derivatives work.

Then IEX will act as the global "speed bump" to keep for fair order flow and keep companies like FTX from front running any clients. This prevents the algorithmic quantum mechanics that allow for infinite liquidity. That one speed bump fucks their whole HFT racket up.

Gmerica/GameStop NFT is one of the biggest global NFT marketplaces and FTX is the derivative plug in/off ramp for the entire world.

Stocks may exchange on FTX through the Loopring liquidity pool, this part I am unsure. But I'd not see a tokenized stock as something GME is going to participate in through a secondary custodian....considering Sam Bankman Fried could literally pull a Kenny and no one could stop it without a decentralized short corner over 100%