For months we've been hearing that if one squeezes the other will follow along. We have also been saying for months that buying and holding is all we need, and that the moass is just a matter of patience, when in reality, DRS seems to be the only way (aside from an NFT) and that buying and holding won't really do much, as the hedgies have pretty much shot down all of our theories. My question is, is it possible they could get liquidated while somehow keeping amc price suppressed? The notion that both will squeeze at once seems to be based on the principle that if an SHF is liquidated, they must sell all their positions, at least in an ideal world that is what should happen, but we've seen time and time again that we do not live in an ideal world.

Do you think if we DRS, gme could possibly squeeze alone?
