Well, I feel like the NFT Market Place launch is almost an elephant in the room at the moment due to current market conditions.

Interested to hear peoples opinions on whether it would be prudent for Ryan and Co. to postpone the launch until there was more stability in the market (Eth is absolutely cratering currently).

A lot of NFT projects will struggle to survive this, so I think the generic JPEG NFTs might be off the menu for a while. If the marketplace launches with niche NFTs related to music, video and gaming then I think it should be ok to launch in the market in its current state, but concerned that if it launches and doesn't bring something unique to the table (in terms of product), the launch might flatline a little and MSM will use it to beat us over the head with.

Just interested to heard some thoughts, not spread fear!
