*¿Qué pasa, simios?

*Got some (tasty, IMO) speculation for you here:

* As the GME short's narratives/gaslighting/deception continue to add up less and less, watch for what I believe will be a growing threat/battlefront they'll have to fight against:

* Unaware/uninformed career MSM "journalists"/hosts/interviewers, who start having more and more natural/unintended "oopsies" live on air...

*I'm specifically referring to:

* Those who've always just regurgitated lines they're given/never desired to look behind the curtain

* Meaning they haven't been made/recruited/paid to become dependable assets who dutifully deliver narratives no matter the level of falsehood

* Yes, that means Jerm Crumber is NOT in this group

*I am NOT suggesting these people are absolved of their chosen ignorance- FAR from it:

* To be sure the VAST majority of them absolutely should know, and IMO, for that they are just as culpable

* Being a "useful idiot" is only understandable for so long before that excuse expires, especially when they've spent many, many years covering the finance/investment industry to climb to the "top" as influential MSM mouthpieces

* BUT: The effect of these "journalist" oopsies will be the same as someone who couldn't have known

*These MSM "journalists" will be covering some "meme trader" or "meme stock" story, doing an interview, covering market news, etc, and the illogical gaslighting/deception will cause them to do what humans do:

* Effectively raise their hand, live on-air, and communicate some version of "that just cannot be, because it doesn't make any sense"

*If I'm right:

* Also watch as whichever MSM "news" org cannot simply say that media personality/host is "on assignment in \[insert location\]" or "taking some personal time off"

* It's likely they'll have to stay on-air, and will increasingly be labeled as "rogue" or as having had some kind of "incorrect assessment" of the situation

* This will be to prevent creating an obvious list of people who said THE wrong thing about GME and were clearly punished/subjected to professional corrective action

In the end:

* I don't see any way the GME shorts can actually get each and every media personality to comply and play along without informing them of why they need to play along...which, they would have to know some of those journalists wouldn't comply, or at least they'd be privately alarmed

* If the number of those types grows (and I think it's inevitable it will) then that's the reason I think the GME shorts have to watch this new-ish battlefield extremely carefully

Existing Examples:

* I don't know if the Tom Keene/Jonathan Ferro exchange on air ("we'd like to be able to come to)work on Monday" is an example that fits this speculation, but it very well could be (Personally think it is an example)

* The recent Becky Quick clip w/ AA could also be one (Quick has already had one of these big "oopsie" moments before- I'll look it up and add here if I can find it)

* EDIT: Per comments- Adding Melissa Lee's "Naked shorts, yeah" moment

* More examples TBD

Future Examples:

* There are definitely more than just the above, and I can/will add them here if anyone comments w/ the reminder/info...

* BUT, the point of the post is that I think these examples are only going to become more and more common, and I for one can't wait to see us catch 'em all :)

Cheers, and happy Tuesday! ■■■
