

Title: Should I be worried of missing out on the stock split by dividend if I haven't received my first CS letter yet? Also, what are the possible scenarios of having the remainder of my shares still not DRSED?

Bulgarian boy euro ape here. I have a few questions, which I would love if some wrinkled retard could clarify for me:

* I have initiated my DRS transfer from DriveWealth (Revolut) on January 10th and received confirmation from DriveWealth on January 26th that my DRS transfer is now complete.

I haven't received any letter from CS yet :(I know it takes a while, but I am not really sure if I should do something now as we are April already..

My question here is - if my DRS transfer is complete does that mean that I would be eligible for the stock split by dividend even if I haven't received any letter from CS yet and have no access to my account?

* My second question is about my remaining non-DRSED shares.

I still hold about 60% of my shares in DriveWealth and IBKR (I wanted to complete my first DRS before I continue DRSing, but still have no letter from CS, hence no account).

What are the possible risks here for me if I have my shares non-DRSED and what are the possible risks if I initiate the DRS transfer for the remainder of my shares even though I am still waiting for my letter from my 1st DRS transfer?

Apologize if this has been discussed or explained elsewhere, but I couldn't find before posting.

Thanks
